Neurosurgeons in Oklahoma

Neurosurgeons are one specialty of a team of physicians involved in the accurate diagnosis and treatment of head injuries as soon as possible after the injury event. They perform surgery as indicated, follow the patient through the hospital stay, and recommend follow up care. Persons who have injury-related problems after discharge or experience problems weeks or months after discharge should contact the neurosurgeon to determine possibility of complications or referral to another physician/professional for appropriate treatment.

Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Physicians

Physicians in this specialty are Board-certified to practice physical medicine and rehabilitation. They are responsible to evaluate and diagnose an individual's physical status in relation to rehabilitative needs, direct the rehabilitation services plan and direct staff who are implementing the services, including physical therapy, occupational therapy, swallowing therapy, speech/language therapy and counseling. The specialty provides rehabilitative care for medical and surgical conditions. Referral for services may be made through professionals or self-referral.

Neuropsychologists, Oklahoma

Neuropsychology is a relatively new field where clinicians investigate the relationship between human behavior and how the brain works. They use several tests to measure the person's skills by evaluating strengths and weaknesses following brain injury, which helps in planning appropriate rehabilitation and vocational (work or school) activity .

Optometrists Who Provide Visual Therapy, Oklahoma

Vision therapy is provided by optometrists who practice preventive and rehabilitative optometry by first seeking the cause of visual dysfunction and treating those causes, not just the symptoms that include headaches, blurred or double vision, poor comprehension, or “not working to potential”. Although the majority of people may benefit from this care, it is especially effective for the following groups:

- Individuals who have suffered a brain injury or other cerebral trauma
- Students diagnosed as “learning disabled”
- Computer users
- Athletes
- Persons labeled as “juvenile delinquents”
- Persons who use their near vision a great deal at work or in recreation

Vision is the dominant sense in the process of deriving meaning from what is seen. It is a learned and developed set of functions that involves many skills. It is estimated that 80%-85% of our perception, learning, cognition and activities are made possible through vision. More than 50% of people with neurologic impairments such as traumatic brain injury, stroke, multiple sclerosis, etc. have visual and visual-cognitive disorders. The three main visual problems resulting from brain injury and stroke are visual field loss, intractable double vision, and visual/balance disorders. In many cases, a poorly developed visual system, or one that has been damaged, leads to processing difficulties for these individuals. A complete visual evaluation can determine if the problem is visually related and if the person can benefit from specific vision therapies.
