

DEFENSE AGAINST LONE WOLVES: What Police Need to Know About Domestic Terrorism

November 13th & 14th, 2019 – 8:00am to 5:00pm
Oklahoma Sheriff Association, 1615 S. State, Edmond, OK
73013

This course will be CLEET certified for 16 hours.

TOPIC: Domestic terror attacks are increasing in frequency and lethality. Here in the West, attacks in Europe and America are happening so fast it's hard for security professionals to keep up. When an attack hits home, it's not the CIA or FBI who are first on the scene, it's the local police. They are on the front lines saving lives, protecting the scene and securing evidence.

However, the police are becoming targets as well. With the increase of IED's, Active Shooter engagements, and ambush attacks from jihadists and other terror groups, it's never been a more dangerous time to be a police officer.

There's a misconception that nothing can be done to prevent these attacks, but that's wrong. The fact is that local authorities are in a better position to intercept and thwart these domestic attacks than their federal counterparts. But it takes knowledge. And it takes training.

Utilizing tactics and strategies from the US and other counter-terror methods, this course will cover:

DAY 1: Understanding the Threat

- 5 Myths About Lone Wolves Attacks
- How terrorist recruit and build networks in plain sight
- The connection between global terrorist networks and individual attackers here
- Case studies and lessons from recent attacks
- And more.

DAY 2: Investigating and Preventing Attacks

- Why police are so often targeted and how to protect yourself
- Threat Recognition and observation
- Cover stories and other deception operations that terrorists use
- Counter-ambush tactics
- And more

INSTRUCTOR: Mark Booher is the Director for the Barritus Defense, an intelligence and security training company. Mark is a veteran of the United States Army where he served in the intelligence and security field conducting force protection and security operations.
