The purposes of the Oklahoma Community Sentencing Act, according to 22 O.S. § 988.3., are to:

1. Protect the public;
2. Establish a statewide community sentencing system;
3. Adequately supervise felony offenders punished under a court-ordered community sentence;
4. Provide a continuum of sanctions to the court for eligible felony offenders sentenced to a community sentence within the community sentencing system;
5. Increase the availability of punishment and treatment options to eligible felony offenders;
6. Improve the criminal justice system within this state through public/private partnerships, reciprocal and interlocal governmental agreements, and interagency cooperation and collaboration; and
7. Operate effectively within the allocation of state and local resources for the criminal justice system.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Oklahoma Community Sentencing Act was implemented in pilot councils in March 2000. As of June 30, 2009, the community sentencing system had been operational on a statewide basis for nine full years. At the conclusion of FY 2009, 32 funded councils, encompassing 53 counties, were participating.

Offenders active in community sentencing at the conclusion of FY 2009 totaled 3,374.

During FY 2009, 1,812 qualifying offenders received a community sentence.

In FY 2009, offenders received community sentences for a wide range of offenses:

- Drugs, 48%
- DUI, 14%
- Property, 26%
- Assault, 7%
- Other, 5%

Case type of offenders receiving a community sentence in FY 2009:

- Suspended, 58%
- Deferred, 42%

Ethnicity of offenders receiving a community sentence in FY 2009:

- Caucasian, 63%
- African American, 22%
- Native American, 12%
- Hispanic, 3%

Gender of offenders receiving a community sentence in FY 2009:

- Male, 66%
- Female 34%

Prior felony convictions of the 1,812 offenders receiving a community sentence in FY 2009 are:

- 17% had 3+ priors
- 11% had 2 priors
- 22% had 1 prior
- 50% had 0 priors

Local planning councils chose private supervision providers for 93% of active community sentenced offenders.

Local community sentencing systems spent $4,999,995 in appropriated funds in FY 2009. An additional $287,374 was expended in statutorily authorized administrative fees collected from offenders participating in the program.

The average annual cost per community sentenced offender was $1,547, less than $5.00 per day.

Local community sentencing system FY 2009 expenditures by service category:

- Treatment services, 46%
- Case management, 47%
- Assessments, 3%
- Administration, 2%
- Restrictive housing, 1%
- Education/training, 1%
- Miscellaneous, <1%

Community sentencing is demonstrating success, and participants completing the program are not likely to recidivate. Longitudinal outcome studies show that 87% of participating offenders who successfully completed the program have remained in the community three years after completion. Thus, only 13% had been received as an inmate of the Oklahoma Department of Corrections.

Community sentencing is a “cents-able” alternative community punishment and a proven investment in public safety.

Preface

The Community Sentencing Division of the Oklahoma Department of Corrections prepared the 2009 Community Sentencing Act Annual Report in compliance with the requirements of 22 O.S. § 988.15.13. Pertinent details concerning assessment, sentencing, resource allocation and prison reception trends are presented.

Introduction

Recent research found that 1 of 31 American adults is under some form of correctional control. That number was 1 of 77 just 25 years ago. The proportion of those in prison or jail versus those on probation or parole has changed very little during the same time frame, despite the addition of 1.1 million prison beds. National research shows that once an offender has been incarcerated, the likelihood of future criminal behavior increases in the absence of appropriately targeted and administered treatment programs.

It is no secret that incarceration is expensive. Community Sentencing is a “cents-able” alternative community punishment administered by the Department of Corrections. The long term success rate of the program is noteworthy. Operational since March, 2000 community sentencing has provided services to 15,854 offenders.

Community Sentencing Participation

The Oklahoma Community Sentencing Act provides for each county to establish a community sentencing system, however, active participation and the request for funding remain optional. During FY 2009 funding was provided for 32 sentencing systems. Of those, 19 were single county and 13 were multi-county systems. The 32 sentencing systems, or planning councils, encompass 53 of the state's 77 counties. Figure 1 depicts participating counties.

Assessments

The Level of Service Inventory-Revised (LSI-R) is the assessment instrument utilized to determine eligibility for community sentencing as outlined in statute. The assessment is conducted prior to sentencing in an effort to identify criminogenic needs of the offender and the risk of re-offending if those needs are not addressed. The Adult Substance Use Survey (ASUS) enhances the information obtained through administration of the LSI-R and assists in the placement of the offender in appropriate levels of substance abuse treatment.

When administered the LSI-R generates a numeric score that is indicative of the combined risk of recidivism and criminogenic needs. The numeric scores, between 1 and 54, are categorized into low, moderate, and high ranges. In order to be considered eligible for a community sentence and to receive funding under the Act, an offender must have a score within the moderate range or have been diagnosed with a mental illness, a developmental disability or a co-occurring mental illness and substance abuse disorder.

Records indicate that 3,120 assessments were conducted to determine if offenders were eligible for community sentencing during FY 2009. Dispositions of the cases on which a LSI-R was conducted for Community Sentencing eligibility are shown in the Figure 2 below.

Qualifying LSI-R Dispositions

Figure 2

Of the qualifying 1,812 offenders receiving a community sentence in FY 2009, 13 % were outside the moderate range. The distribution of the LSI-R scores of community sentenced offenders is shown in Figure 3.

Sentencing Practices

At the conclusion of FY 2009 community sentencing celebrated its tenth anniversary as a viable sentencing option and a “cents-able” community punishment for non-violent offenders.

FY 2009 sentencings under the Act declined approximately 9%. This could be due to the reduced availability of funds as participating judges and assistant district attorneys were concerned about providing appropriate levels of service for existing offenders. Another possible explanation is that felony filings statewide decreased during the same time frame. The active number of offenders remained stable primary due the sentencing patterns in FY 07 and FY08.

Sentences Ordered and Active Cases

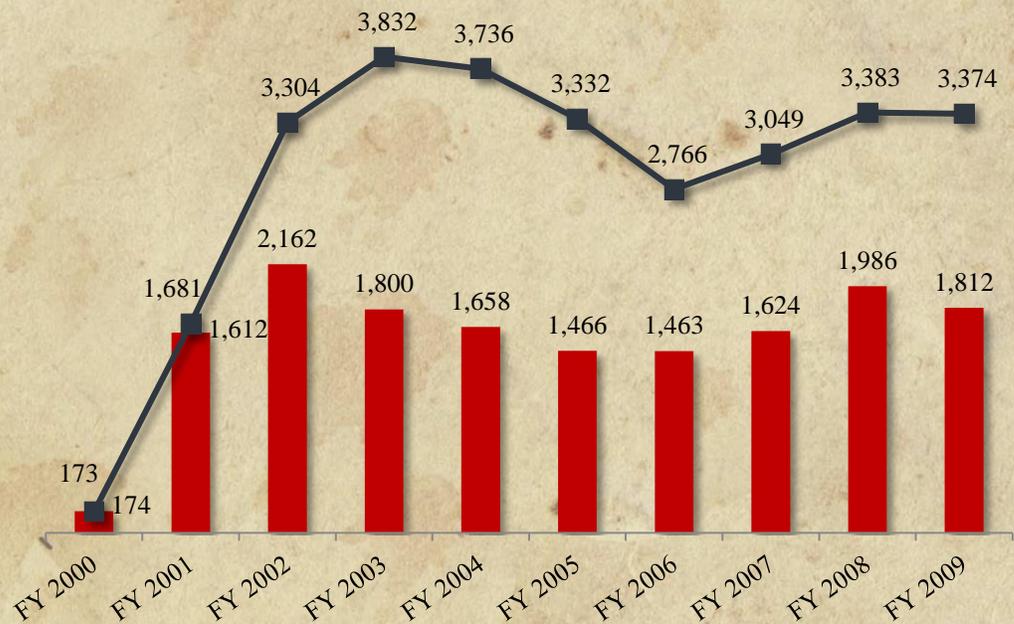

Figure 4

Of the 32 funded councils, 29 expended funds for active offenders sentenced in previous years and 28 sentenced offenders and expended funds during the current fiscal year. The table in Figure 6 provides a historical and a current picture of sentencing system participation.

A profile of the offenders receiving a community sentence in FY 2009 is detailed in the following charts.

FY 2009 Offense Category

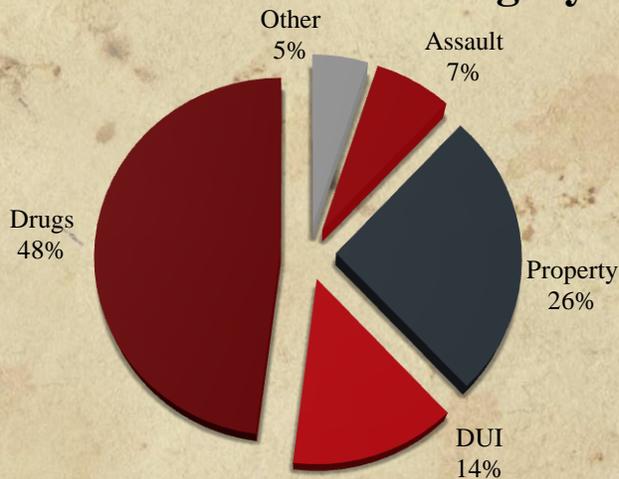

Figure 6

FY 2009 Case Type

Community sentences were ordered for a variety of crimes. Substance abuse related offenses comprised the majority, 62 percent, of sentences ordered with drug related offenses representing 48 percent and DUI 14 percent. Property crimes, which included offenses such as Larceny of Merchandise and Uttering a Forged Instrument, were reported for 26 percent of sentences. Although non-violent offenses are targeted by community sentencing, some crimes categorized as “assaultive” are eligible for the program with the consent of the prosecutor. Assaultive offenses such as Assault and Battery, Domestic Abuse, and weapons related crimes accounted for seven percent of the FY 2009 sentences. “Other” offenses made up the remaining five percent of community sentences ordered and encompassed crimes including False Impersonation, Harboring a Fugitive, and Perjury. The offense categories, by percent, for which community sentences were ordered during FY 2009, are shown in Figure 7.

A community sentence is statutorily a condition of probation. Figure 8 illustrates that a community sentence was ordered as a condition of a suspended sentence in 58 percent of cases and as a condition of a deferred sentence in 42 percent.

ANNUAL REPORT 2009

FY 2009 Ethnicity

Figure 8

FY 2009 Gender

Figure 9

Caucasian adults comprised 63 percent of offenders participating in community sentencing and 76 percent of the adult population in OK according to the 2000 Census data. African Americans account for 22 percent of the community sentencing population and only 8 percent of the general adult population in the state. Native Americans represent 12 percent of offenders and 7 percent of the general population. Hispanics are represented less frequently in the community sentencing population than in the state population, 3 percent and 8 percent respectively. Asians make up less than 1 percent of the community sentencing population but 2 percent of the state's adult population.

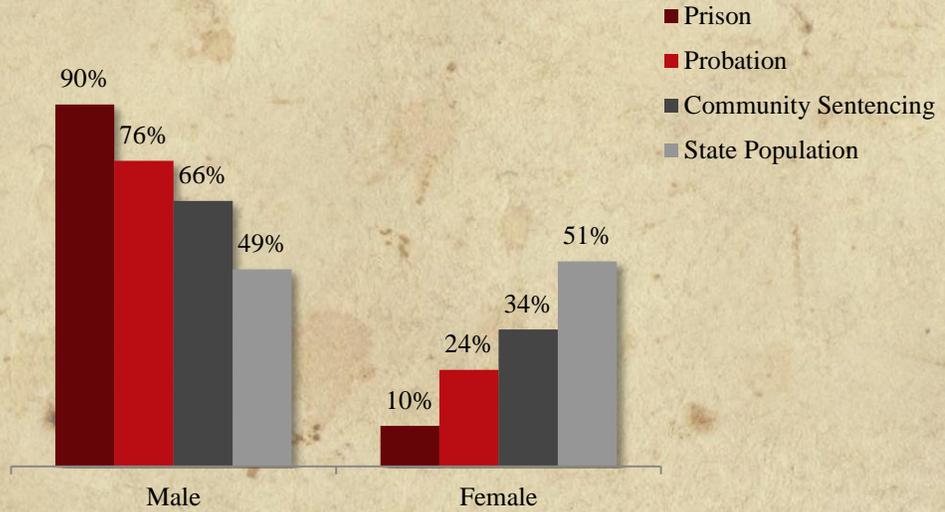

These figures indicate ...

Equally interesting is the data on race from the census report. Census figures indicate that 49 percent of Oklahoma's adult population is male and 51 percent is female. The community sentencing population is comprised of 66 percent males and 34 percent females while the prison population is startlingly different at 90 percent male and 10 percent female.

Resource Allocation

State funding was reduced by $500,000 at the start of FY 2009 as sentencing to the program was increasing and the number of active offenders was also on the rise. Council budget allocations were made using the same methodology as in previous years. Councils whose sentencing practices indicated fidelity to the concept of diverting offenders from prison were rewarded while those who were net widening were not. Due to the reduction in funding and the increase in active participants, many councils used their administrative monies collected from offenders to cover the cost of services that would not otherwise have been available. Figure 12 lists, by planning council, the FY 2009 expenditures from both state allocated funds and the administrative fee category.

Planning councils are authorized under the Act to contract with a private entity to provide supervision services for its offenders or to utilize the supervision services of state probation and parole officers. State probation and parole supervision is available to the council at no cost while private contractors must be paid from the council's budget. The majority of councils have elected to contract for supervision services. Figure 13 shows the distribution of offenders under private and state supervision at the end of FY 2009.

Case management costs have remained fixed since the beginning of the program but the percent of money spent in that category keeps has increased. The percentage of offenders that are under supervision by private entities has increased leading to a larger portion of expenditures being devoted to case management activities. Treatment related services, which included substance abuse/mental health treatment and cognitive behavioral skills training comprised 47 percent of the total expenditures.

It appears that councils were committed to ensuring case management functions, including urinalysis testing, were provided while treatment services had to be reduced.

COMMUNITY SENTENCING

EFFECTIVENESS OF COMMUNITY SENTENCING

While the Oklahoma Community Sentencing Act does not provide a clear definition of “success” for the program, the first purpose (22 O.S. § 988.3) cited is protection of the public. Reducing the likelihood of future law violations by community sentencing offenders is one of the best ways to protect the public. The evidence based practices employed by the Community Sentencing Division encourage service providers to address the criminogenic needs of offenders in order to promote pro-social behavior and reduce the likelihood of re-offending.

Program effectiveness is frequently measured by recidivism studies. In corrections, a recidivist is most often identified as an offender who is received as an inmate within three years of his release from probation supervision or from prison. Community sentencing has now been in existence for a period of time adequate to support annual longitudinal outcome studies utilizing the commonly held definition of recidivism in corrections.

The fourth annual study examining long-term outcomes of offenders completing a community sentence was completed at the conclusion of FY 2009. The study results are demonstrated in Figure 22. Of the 1,398 offenders who successfully completed the program during FY 2006, 87 percent remained in the community three years after the termination of their supervision. Only 13 percent had been received as an inmate of the Oklahoma Department of Corrections. Females were more likely to be successful than males with 90 percent of women remaining in the community three years after supervision compared to 85 percent of men.

FY 2009 Longitudinal Outcomes

The diversion of offenders from incarceration continued as a frequent definition of programmatic success. The only diversions from prison identified with certainty were those offenders receiving a community sentence in lieu of revocation or acceleration to prison for violation of an existing probationary sentence. In FY 2009, 205 offenders were diverted from prison to community sentencing. Figure 20 depicts, by council, those diversions.

The percentage of offenders with three or more prior felony convictions increased during FY 2009 contrary to previous time periods. The percentage of offenders with no prior felonies decreased from the last fiscal year but remains higher than other reported time periods.

Based upon the rapid growth of District Attorney supervision programs, it is anticipated that this trend will continue.
