Trends in Cultural Consciousness

8:30 – 12:00, Room 150

As you stroll down memory lane of past cultural trends, you'll yield to what is the current working definition of culture. You will make frequent stops at awareness and subcultures and discuss how you acquired your current cultural awareness and how it applies to providing culturally competent care. This Cultural Competency class is based on the model by Georgetown University Center for Child and Human Development. The model includes useful tools for professional use. Participants will earn 3 Continuing Education credits upon completion of the class.

Presented by Renee Mack, Training Specialist III, ODMHSAS.

Mind Your Words: Directional Dialogs

8:30 – 12:00, Room 119

Much of what we do depends on our ability to communicate efficiently and accurately. Even so, there are times when the quality of communication becomes the issue. This workshop will address some of the problems we have when conversations are both difficult and critical. We will look at how to structure the communication in ways that allow all parties to feel valued and heard and to address specific issues. There will be opportunities to practice the skills used in expertly directing the dialog to achieve the best outcome. Participants will earn 3 Continuing Education credits upon completion of the class.

Presented by Pam Champeau, Training Specialist II, ODMHSAS.

Ethical Dilemmas in Crisis Settings

1:00 – 4:30, Room 150

This presentation will provide an overview of professional boundary and other ethical issues encountered when delivering mental health services in a crisis setting. The focus is on ethical issues encountered in a variety of inpatient and outpatient settings. Discussion and examples will be included about HIPAA regulations, 43A, and psychotherapeutic relationships. Participants will earn 3 Continuing Education/Ethics credits upon completion of the class.

Presented by Ron Sims, M.A., LADC/MH, ODMHSAS Community Response Team.

The Slippery Slope of Boundaries and Trust

1:00 – 4:30, Room 119

Marking a line in the sand, making a clear statement, posting a sign or simply stepping away from someone are all ways to set a boundary. There are times when boundaries aren't made clear and over time become blurred. The goal of the class is to enhance the understanding of boundaries and trust, and their role in your professional life. Participants will earn 3 Continuing Education Credits upon completion of the class.

Presented by Renee Mack, Training Specialist III, ODMHSAS.
