

Oklahoma Crystal Darkness Collaborative

The Oklahoma Crystal Darkness Collaborative (OCDC), formerly the Oklahoma Methamphetamine Prevention Collaborative convened in 2007 to lead meth prevention in the state of Oklahoma holistically by representing all segments of society, identifying and mending gaps in statewide infrastructure, and implementing sustainable strategies to achieve long term change. The Collaborative goals are to prevent the initiation of meth use, and reduce meth use and the problems related to meth use. To successfully fulfill the vision of the Collaborative, OCDC aims to guide Oklahoma communities in developing comprehensive, sustainable methamphetamine prevention programs. The Collaborative has worked to develop a methamphetamine prevention toolkit and planned and executed the first annual statewide methamphetamine prevention conference. The Collaborative is continuing its involvement with the Crystal Darkness Oklahoma campaign (documentary aired in a roadblock January 13, 2008) through 28 countywide forums throughout the state and continued technical assistance to all Oklahoma communities in implementing evidence-based meth prevention programs.
