DEPARTMENT OF LABOR PRESENTS SAFETY COMMENDATION TO LONG TIME TULSA BUSINESS

TULSA – Deputy Commissioner John Goodwin presented a SHARP commendation to McElroy Manufacturing Inc.

Department of Labor Deputy Commissioner John Goodwin honored McElroy Manufacturing with a SHARP certification in a presentation today at the company's Tulsa facility. He recognized management and employees for their continued commitment to safety and health in the workplace.

Marketing Manager of McElroy Manufacturing, Sharon McElroy stated, "Achieving the SHARP certification has put McElroy Manufacturing Inc among an elite group of companies within Oklahoma. We are proud to be a part of that group. The consistent review and fine tuning of our safety programs is the benefit that has allowed us to stay well below the national average injury rate."

SHARP was designed by the federal OSHA to encourage and recognize excellence in occupational safety and health. Director of OSHA Consultation, Diana Jones said, "McElroy is a model for work site safety and health."

Deputy Commissioner Goodwin joined Senator Andelson in presenting commendations to President Chip McElroy during a lunch presentation in front of its employees. McElroy Manufacturing Inc. has worked with the Department of Labor's OSHA Consultants for the past 15 years to streamline and implement the company's health and safety programs. This is McElroy's sixth Sharp Certification.
