Instructor Development Course

About the Alive at 25 program (3rd Edition)

Did you know young drivers between the ages of 16 and 24 represent the largest group of problem drivers on the road? Motor vehicle collisions are the number one cause of death for young adults. We need to go beyond basic driver's education and teach critical defensive driving techniques to young drivers once they have received their license and feel confident and "experienced". Providing this additional training is a must in order to make our nation's highways safer now and in the future. Let us partner with you to help protect these teenagers so they will be alive when they reach the age of 25.

Alive at 25 is a survival course developed by the National Safety Council. Its main objective is to prevent the number of automobile accidents that claim the lives of our teens. Alive at 25 is taught exclusively by trained police officers. The course is taught in one 4 hour session which focuses on the behaviors young drivers and passengers display behind the wheel. Students learn about the devastating consequences of practicing risky driving behaviors. Watching interactive videos, sharing driving experiences, and role-playing various driving situations are just some of the ways these valuable lessons are taught. The cost of this course is $315 per person.

Instructor Course Training goal

This 2-day course will train you to work with the largest group of at-risk drivers using materials and topics they identify with.

Who should attend?

- Driving school instructors
- High school driver education teachers
- State, county and local police, public information officers, court trainers and driving schools working with newly licensed drivers or teen violators
