Tulsa State Fair Attendees Can Find “Pot of Gold” At Treasurer’s Unclaimed Property Booth

OKLAHOMA CITY – State Treasurer Scott Meacham is heading to the Tulsa State Fair to help Oklahomans find their unclaimed property. As administrator of Oklahoma’s unclaimed property program, Meacham has more than $179 million for more than 789,000 people.

Meacham and his staff will man a booth on the lower level of the Expo Building at the fair. This will be the first time the office has operated the “Pot of Gold” booth at the Tulsa State Fair.

“I’m pleased we can now bring our staff with laptop computers to conduct searches for patrons of the Tulsa State Fair,” said Meacham, who was sworn in as state treasurer on June 1 of this year. “We are holding millions of dollars in unclaimed property waiting for it to be claimed by its rightful owners. I encourage all fair attendees to stop by our booth to see if we are holding any of their money.”

During the past five years at the fair in Oklahoma City, more than 2,500 people have found more than $1.25 million of unclaimed property.

Examples of unclaimed property include bank accounts, security deposits, uncashed paychecks, overpayments, royalties, rebates, stock and bonds. The contents of abandoned safe deposit boxes are also included.

The cash and property are turned over to the State Treasurer’s office when the businesses holding them lose track of the owners. Treasurer Meacham’s Unclaimed Property Division then publishes the names and conducts other outreach, such as the booth at the state fair, to help find the owners.

The Unclaimed Property booth in the Expo building will be open throughout the fair. Workers will be on hand to offer assistance September 29 through October 9.
